

18th Century Antique

A very important late 18th century statuary marble chimney piece with detached fluted columns terminating in ionic capitals, beneath corner blockings carved with anthemions. The chimney piece has a centre tablet that closely resembles that by Robert Adam in the library at Kenwood House and this chimney piece overall echoes his work in much of its detail and in the quality of its execution. The frieze panels are inlaid with stop flutes of richly figured Blue John, which continues to either side of the corner blockings. The chimney piece has a carved breakfront cornice shelf.
