

18th Century Antique

An Irish Georgian statuary and Sienna marble chimneypiece from the late 18th century. Carved in Old English Carrara with fine pencil veins of a restrained architectural form. The breakfront shelf presides over a striking tablet, a specimen of Convent Sienna marble interrupts the opulent use of Old English Carrara creating a Palladian sensibility. The frieze and jambaes are kept from each other by a neat reeding which forms a dado and runs the entire length of the piece.
